Record lottery threatens Silicon Valley self-worth

TNEW YORK (Reuters Breakingviews) - The Mega Millions lottery jackpot, available in 44 U.S. states, the District of Columbia and the U.S. Virgin Islands, has reached a record $1.6 billion. A successful punter or several will become at least as well off as founders of a hefty Silicon Valley technology unicorn. Rubbing shoulders on rich lists might rankle with startup billionaires - but their wealth owes plenty to luck, too.

Signs display the jackpots for Tuesday's Mega Millions and Wednesday's Powerball lottery drawings in New York City, New York, U.S., October 23, 2018. REUTERS/Mike Segar

The accumulation of all great fortunes involves a dollop of chance. Tuesday's drawing may create one entirely on luck. The net, assuming a lump sum payout - smaller than the headline figure, which assumes regular payments over years - would probably be somewhere north of $500 million after tax for a single winner. That's more than many paper billionaires in Silicon Valley are probably worth, given the proliferation of private companies with vapor-fueled valuations. The lottery structure of many dud bets and a few giant payouts is also familiar to venture-capital and angel investors. The economics are better, however. Jackpots roll over when there's no winner but only new $2 tickets are valid, so right now expected returns on Mega Millions are positive. Buying all 303 million number combinations - if that were somehow possible - would net at least a share of the jackpot and about $75 million in secondary prizes. That's surely better odds than backing a pool of new cryptocurrency and dog-walking startups.

If the top prize again goes begging, Friday's prize will be far larger, as each bigger tally attracts more players than the last and a slice of their stakes are added to the next. Before long, an eventual winner could land in rarified levels of wealth, even for Palo Alto.

More than a few tech leaders cling to the idea that smarts, skill and perspiration took them to the top of the heap. Wealth is merely a handy scorecard for these traits. Perhaps it's easier than admitting that, in a world of winner-take-all companies, a chance of investment or timing could have easily favored another social network, advertising platform or dating app. For them, a lottery winner with a fatter bank account may induce some psychic distress.

End of September is the Mid-Autumn Festival season, according to Chinese culture and it is the time to show love and care to family members with the Chinese traditional dessert - Mooncake.

During the 2018 Mid-Autumn Festival, China Xiamen Sungiven Foods company and Rhythm Media launched donation activities to show love to the orphan care centers in Texas with "family" brand mooncake. The orphans and foster care centers who received the gifts were very happy to have the donations from the Asian community and while they learned a new culture experience from eating the sweet mooncake.

Barbara, head of the World for Children Houston, said: "This is the first time World for Children Houston has received a donation from the Chinese community. It is a surprise, this center takes care of an average of 60 kids and as a charity organization, we are not as famous as the Houston Food Bank, but we rely on people's donations as well. So we much appreciate it if the media can help broadcast our name so more people will be aware of the needs of these special group of children. Orphan Care Solutions of Texas is located in the city of Spring and is set in a quiet forest area. The staff at the center are all young faces. Office head Chelsea said, "Many children here have had some sad experiences; these cakes are an extra comfort to those hearts that need special care. You see, each of the President Trump on Monday said that the U.S. will begin to cut off or reduce aid to Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador as citizens of those countries flee for the U.S. as part of a so-called caravan of migrants. In a trio of tweets, the president escalated his rhetoric surrounding the group of migrants, declaring a national emergency as they approach the border and claiming that "unknown Middle Easterners" had joined the group.

Trump, in the tweets, did not offer any evidence for the charge that people from the Middle East were among those crossing the border.

"Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador were not able to do the job of stopping people from leaving their country and coming illegally to the U.S. We will now begin cutting off, or substantially reducing, the massive foreign aid routinely given to them," Trump wrote in a tweet.

"Sadly, it looks like Mexico's Police and Military are unable to stop the Caravan heading to the Southern Border of the United States. Criminals and unknown Middle Easterners are mixed in. I have alerted Border Patrol and Military that this is a National [Emergency]. Must change laws!"

Trump had previously threatened to cut off aid to those countries if they did not act to stop their citizens from fleeing. It's unclear if Trump will take unilateral action to reduce foreign aid, as Congress is not scheduled to return to Washington until after the midterm elections.

Experts have noted that human rights laws restrict actions a government can take to prevent its citizens from leaving its borders.

The White House did not immediately respond to a request for comment from The Hill about plans to cut foreign aid or to declare a national emergency.

Trump's suggestion that Middle Easterners had joined the group came shortly after a guest on "Fox & Friends" raised the specter of ISIS fighters embedding themselves in the group. The guest, Peter Hegseth, cited quotes attributed to Guatemalan President Jimmy Morales but acknowledged the claims have not been verified.

Trump: U.S. Will 'Begin Cutting Off' Aid To Countries Associated With Migrant Caravan

Compiled And Edited By John T. Robbins, Southern Daily Editor

The president is known to watch the show regularly and often comment about segments on Twitter.

Trump has for days characterized the caravan as a horde of criminals in cahoots with the Democrats while providing no evidence for his claims.

"Every time you see a Caravan, or people illegally coming, or attempting to come, into our Country illegally, think of and blame the Democrats for not giving us the votes to change our pathetic Immigration Laws! Remember the Midterms! So unfair to those who come in legally," Trump tweeted Monday.

The caravan of thousands crossed into Mexico over the weekend, continuing their journey toward the U.S. border in search of asylum.

The group swelled to close to 5,000, The Associated Press reported, after an initial group of 2,000 crossed the Guatemala-Mexico border rather than waiting for asylum processing there.

The president has pointed to the caravan to stoke fear of an influx of undocumented immigrants and to blame Democrats for failing to pass stronger immigration laws, despite Republicans controlling both chambers of Congress.

Trump last week warned that he may take military action to stop immigrants from crossing the southern border if Mexico does not take action to stop the "onslaught."

As a thousands-strong 'caravan' of migrants makes its way towards the US' southern border, President Trump took to Twitter to threaten to cut off foreign aid to Central American governments and deploy the military to the border.

"Sadly, it looks like Mexico's Police and Military are unable to stop the Caravan heading to the Southern Border of the United States," Trump tweeted on Monday. "Criminals and unknown Middle Easterners are mixed in. I have alerted Border Patrol and Military that this is a National Emergency. Must change laws!"

Originating in Honduras two weeks ago, the 'caravan' has since swelled in numbers, and thousands of migrants are now marching through Mexico in a mile-long, ten-abreast convoy. Believing their odds to be greater in numbers, the migrants have already passed through Guatemala and have another 1,600 miles to go through Mexico until they reach the US' southern border.

Trump had warned Mexico's government last week "in the strongest of terms," to halt the caravan's advance, and threatened to rip up a recently signed trade agreement with Mexico if Enrique Peña Nieto's government doesn't act to stop illegal immigration. While Mexican authorities had halted the caravan at the border with Guatemala, many crossed illegally, and more broke through the border fence and continued their journey.

'These aren't little angels!' Trump denounces 'hardened criminals' storming Mexico border.

Attempts on Sunday, by mostly unarmed Federal Police, to block the caravan outside the town of Tapachula failed, as officers withdrew due to the size of the crowd. Trump's "unknown Middle Easterners" likely refers to Guatemalan President Jimmy Morales' claim last week that his country has apprehended and deported "close to 100 people" linked to the Islamic State (IS, formerly ISIS/ISIL) terrorist group, and more than 1,000 MS-13 gang members, as the caravan crossed Guatemala.

President Trump again repeated his warning from last week that he would deploy the military to secure the border if Mexico fails to stop the caravan's advance. Trump previously deployed the National Guard to the border in April, as a smaller caravan headed to the US, but said over the weekend that he would deploy "the military, not the guard."

Two weeks out from the crucial midterm elections, Trump also hit out at Democrats for failing to vote in favor of two Republican sponsored immigration bills earlier this year. "Every time you see a Caravan, or people illegally coming, or attempting to come, into our Country illegally, think of and blame the Democrats for not giving us the votes to change our pathetic Immigration Laws! Remember the Midterms! So unfair to those who come in legally."

With the migrants now well into Mexico, Trump blasted the governments of Honduras, El Salvador, and Guatemala for allowing the caravan to get this far in the first place.
