Feature: COVID-19 comeback locks free spirited Aussies at home

SYDNEY, July 6 (Xinhua) -- Like many Australians, Sydneysider Suzan Saroukos is a beach lover who enjoys regular sunbathing trips to the beach, but her favourite spot, Bondi beach, once an iconic tourist hotspot in Sydney, has now been roped off as a COVID-19 hotspot.

Peace has been disrupted once again for Aussies after the Delta variant hit the country's most populous city Sydney in mid-June.

By June 25, just after Australia's second-most populous city Melbourne ended its lockdown, authorities in the state of New South Wales (NSW) decided to put Sydney into lockdown.

The decision came after a surge of the local transmission since June 16, when the index case for the Bondi cluster, a driver who transported international flight crew, was found to be infected with the Delta variant.

The outbreak quickly spread to four other states and territories across Australia, bursting Australia's bubble that in the past had kept it largely detached from the global pandemic.

It has been almost half a year since the first outbreak ended in Sydney. The recent increase in cases has brought Aussies' memories back to the first time they were under lockdown. It has also been a realization of the ways in which their lifestyles have been forever changed.

It was 8:30 a.m. when Saroukos rushed downstairs to collect her parcel, a fifth set of pajamas, the latest addition to her wardrobe full of robes in all colours. Delighted, Saroukos crowned herself "pajama queen."

"I used to be 'office queen.' I like to dress up in the office, to be sharp," Saroukos told Xinhua.

From scented candles to blankets, after realizing more than a year ago that she would be forced to change her daily life, Saroukos has started to collect housewares in an effort to spruce up her apartment.

"I used to go to the gym, but I put on weight during the lockdown, so I bought the fitness bicycle, dumbbells, and yoga mat to do gym at home. I also bought an air fryer to make sure that I eat healthily," Saroukos said.

"I can get a tan at home too. I bought many beauty supplies to help," she said.

With a sunshade, a long lounge chair, a tray, cushions and plants, Saroukos has even converted her outside balcony into her own private "beach," a place for her to read and get a tan under the sunshine on the weekend.

"I adjust myself. Moving everything home during lockdown makes me feel happier. I like my homely and cosy home."

Colin Chan, an educator in his 50s living in Sydney's inner west, told Xinhua that since the implementation of restrictions he has felt less inclined to make travel plans or try new things in the community because he knows the restrictions might change at any time.

"Me and my partner used to try new things, we did Latin dance for a while and then we did Yoga in glebe; now I wouldn't be inclined to try new things until I have my full vaccine.

"I used to go to the gym two or three times a week with a mate of mine, now, we still talk over the phone but it is not the same. My friendships feel a lot less personal," he

The recent lockdown in Sydney has forced Chan to cancel a trip to Cairns in the Australian state of Queensland he had planned. He is now planning to spend more time looking after his plants and having barbecues at home with his housemates.

Just as being at the beach and out in the sun makes Aussies feel free, having a drink and listening to live music at a pub is how Aussies wind down after work. For Aussies, pubs are more than just a place for eating and drinking.

Lachlan Maclaine-Cross is an accountant based in Melbourne, and at night, he is also the lead singer of Moonshifter, a band that used to perform in pubs twice a month.

Cross said spending time in pubs is a way that Australian people get together.

"It's a way that we see our mates ... Some bars are just taking in DJs, but a lot of pubs, particularly in Melbourne, have live music ... There is a huge restaurant culture in Melbourne," Cross said.

Cross said his band was trying to build momentum with audiences before the pandemic and hoped to roll over to the next show and keep the momentum going, but in past months every time he was just getting started the cord would suddenly get pulled.

The state of Victoria was the epicenter of Australia's second wave, and the state endured its fourth lockdown last month.

"A gig would get cancelled or an entire festival would be cancelled. The last time we shut down Melbourne, none of those performances were aired," Cross

Instead of being surrounded by crowds and noise in pubs, Cross's only audience now is his wife and cat. He is trying to use the time to reflect on himself and prepare for his next time on stage.

"(I am) trying to use the time effectively, so there's a lot of preparation to get a song ready for audiences. And it's not just the song itself, it can be the production, the visual image that goes with it, so I've just been thinking about what music I want to release in the context of the music."

Despite a long time away from beaches and pubs, Cross, Chan and Saroukos are still engaged in both their work and hobbies, focusing on self-development, adapting to every change in life, and waiting for Australia to "unmask."

"Just be positive, if we can't change anything, the most important thing is that we keep a good mindset. Every day is a blessing now," Saroukos said

More Asians Need To Enter The Political Arena

More than one and one-half years after pandemic, our community has changed. Because of so many hate crimes and economic reasons, many people choose to go back to Asia because they are disappointed with what is happening in America.

Last week we had the honor to greet Texas Senator John Whitmire in our media center. We also told the senator how worried we are these days in our community. Senator Whitmire is a very senior senator. He has served in the U.S. Senate for thirty-eight years.

In the conversation, I told the senator that the people in our area are very worried about what is going on in the community. Many politicians have used the virus as a shameful stigma towards Asian Americans. The huge impact of hate crimes has also changed the domestic political and economic landscape. We must understand that participation in politics is the way to protect our rights.

Texas State Representative Gene Wu also joined us to meet with a group of minority media leaders. We are also so glad Representative Wu is doing a great job for our community. We need to give him more support, including financially and by going out to vote.

Many Asian families need to let their next generations become politicians, instead of just becoming doctors.

The world is changing. Asian American should take more political paths.

Celebrating Asian American And Pacific Islander Heritage Month

Six Charts That Shed Light On Images Of Asian Americans Held By Many

By Connie Hanzhang Jin - NPR Writer

Compiled And Edited By John T. Robbins, Southern Daily Editor

"Smart." "Hard-working." "Nice." Those were among the adjectives that respondents offered up in a recent poll when asked to describe Asian Americans.

The poll, conducted by the nonprofit Leading Asian Americans to Unite for Change (LAAUNCH), was another all-too-familiar reminder that Asian Americans are still perceived as the "model minority."

Since the end of World War II, this myth about Asian Americans and their perceived collective success has been used as a racial wedge — to minimize the role racism plays in the struggles of other minority groups, such as Black Americans.

Characterizing Asian Americans as a model minority flattens the diverse experiences of Asian Americans into a singular, narrow narrative. And it paints a misleading picture about the community that doesn't align with current statistics.

Here's a look at some common misconceptions driven by the model minority myth.

Myth: Asian Americans are a single monolithic group

Jin - NPR Writer

Robbins, Southern Daily Editor

Currently, more than 22 million people of Asian descent live in the U.S., making up approximately 7% of the nation's population. They trace their heritage to different regions around the world, with

More than 1.5 million Pacific Islanders, who descend from Micronesia, Melanesia or Polynesia, live in the U.S. as well.

Academics and activists trace the term "Asian American" to 1968, when students at the University of California, Berkeley, founded the Asian American Political Alliance. At the time, the group sought to unite students of Japanese, Chinese and Filipino descent to fight for political and social recognition.

"Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders" (AAPI) is a term that has its roots in the 1980s and '90s, when the U.S. Census Bureau used the "Asian Pacific American" classification to group Asians, Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders together. In 1997, the bureau disaggregated the categories into "Asian" and "Pacific Islander."

Scholars and activists have critiqued both terms for masking differences in histories and needs among communities, as well as supporting the myth that Asian Americans are a monolithic group.

Within these regional groups, a huge variety of ethnicities exist within the Asian American community. People who identify their heritage as Chinese, Indian or Filipino make up the largest share.

MANY ETHNICITIES FALL UNDER THE ASIAN AMERICAN UMBRELLA

Notes

Ethnicities with fewer than 100,000 people not shown. The U.S. Census Bureau classifies a person of Asian descent as anyone who traces their heritage to a subset of countries in the continent of Asia. But there may be people outside of this classification who self-identify as Asian.

These numbers have risen rapidly in recent years. The Asian American population is the fastest-growing racial or ethnic group in the U.S., growing by 81% from 2000 to 2019. The Hispanic population saw the second-fastest growth, at 70%, followed by Native Hawaiians and Pacific Islanders, at 60%. The white population grew by only 1% in that time.

Myth: Asian Americans are high earning and well educated

Asian Americans have a median household income of around $78,000 a year, which is higher than the national median of about $66,000. However, that overall statistic obscures large differences among different Asian-origin groups.

These economic disparities are partially driven by similar disparities in education levels among Asian Americans. The highest-earning groups — Indian American and Taiwanese American households — also have the highest levels of education, while the lowest-earning groups have comparatively lower levels of education.

In fact, a 2018 Pew Research Center study found that Asian Americans were the most economically divided racial or ethnic group in the U.S., with Asian Americans in the top 10th of the income distribution making 10.7 times more than those in the bottom 10th.

Myth: Asian Americans immigrate to the U.S. in the "right" way

More than half of those who identify as Asian American and at least 17% of Pacific Islanders were born outside the U.S., according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

The Asian American community has the highest proportion of immigrants of any ethnic or racial group in the United States. Yet, Asian Americans are often overlooked in debates about immigration reform.

Asians have a wide range of reasons for immigrating to the U.S., including those coming as refugees or asylum-seekers. Out of the almost 11 million estimated undocumented immigrants in the U.S., around 1.5 million (14%) are from Asia, according to the Migration Policy Institute.

Heightened immigration enforcement has also impacted Asian Americans. From 2015 to 2018, Immigration and Customs Enforcement arrested about 15,000 immigrants from Asia, according to a report by the nonprofit Asian Ame icans Advancing Justice.

The report also found that Southeast Asian immigrants were three to four times more likely to be deported for old criminal convictions compared with other immigrant groups. Out of the approximately 16,000 Southeast Asians with final removal orders in that period, more than 13,000 had removal orders that were based on old criminal conviction.

Myth: Asian Americans Face Less Systemic Racism And Discrimination Since the coronavirus pandemic started, hate crimes and violence against Asian Americans have increased. In an April survey conducted by the Pew Research Center, 32% of Asian American adults — a greater percentage than any other racial or ethnic group — said that they feared someone might threaten or physically attack them.

In response, the House of Representatives passed the COVID-19 Hate Crimes Act on May 18. The bill would have the Justice Department appoint a point person to expedite the review of hate crimes related to COVID-19. It would also direct resources toward making the reporting of hate crimes more accessible.

Despite increased news coverage of various attacks against Asian Americans and the upcoming legislation, the LAAUNCH survey, which was conducted between March 29 to April 14, found that 37% of white Americans were not aware of increased incidents of hate crimes.

But anti-Asian bias and discrimination are not new to the pandemic. To understand the current climate, it's important to look at historical context. In past periods of national tension, especially during times when the U.S. has been at war with Asian countries, anti-Asian racism has similarly risen.

Myth: Asian Americans are fairly represented in leadership positions

The recent LAAUNCH survey also found that almost half of Americans incorrectly believe that Asian Americans are overrepresented or fairly represented in senior positions within American companies, politics, media or other realms.

In reality, Asian Americans are underrepresented in these positions of power, holding about 3% of these positions in comparison with composing 7% of the U.S. population, a report from The New York Times found last year.

More specifically, Asian Americans have the lowest degree of representation in political office compared with any other racial or ethnic group.

Asian Americans Are The Most Politically Underrepresented Group When it comes to holding elected office, as of last year Asian Americans were underrepresented relative to their population by a differential of -85%. White people were overrepresented by 46%.

Asian Americans are even underrepresented in states with a high concentration of Asian American residents, like New York and California, according to a report by the Reflective Democracy Campaign.

Especially since the start of collective activism among Asian Americans in the 1960s, Asian Americans have had a rich history of political activism and involvement. But that history has not always translated to greater representation in political leadership.

One finding in the LAAUNCH survey may point to answers: 92% of Americans polled said they were comfortable with Asian Americans as doctors or friends, but only 85% said they were comfortable with an Asian American as a boss and 73% as a president of the United States.

Despite these perceptions, Asian Americans are pushing forward. Asian Americans increased their voter turnout rate by more than any other racial or ethnic group in the 2020 election and in part helped Joe Biden win Georgia. In that same year, 158 Asian Americans ran for state legislatures, the highest number since the 2018 midterms. (Courtesy https://www.npr.org/)

自南國際電視15.3《美南時事通》 漫談中共建黨百年《美國獨立日與中美關係!

(本報記者黃梅子)7月是一個不 尋常的月份,7月1日是中國共產黨建黨 100周年,中共在北京舉行了盛大的慶 祝活動。

而7月4日是美國獨立日,全美國 也是舉國歡慶。這個獨立日是在新冠大 流行18個月之後的第一次全國開放慶祝 日,美國疫情肆虐一年多,感染總數近 三千四百萬人,逾總人口數一成,死亡 超過六十萬,致死率約百分之二,可謂 災情慘重。開國二百四十五年以來,在 承平時期應是前所未有的浩劫,在疫苗 供應無缺疫情大致已獲控製下,美國大 肆慶祝。美國和中國作爲當今世界最重 要的兩個大國,都大張旗鼓聲勢浩蕩地 慶祝自己的節日。兩國互別苗頭的情勢 已成,必將形塑未來至少十年的寰宇風 貌,牽動人類文明的波瀾壯闊的發展。

六月,美國總統拜登展開一系列的外 交攻勢,拉歐盟扯日韓,還與俄羅斯總 統普京在瑞士日內瓦面晤, -與大陸復談國防與經貿問題,未獲積極 回應下,又放話將在十月裡的G20會上 與中方領導人面商競合的大計雲雲,關 心世情的各方朋友應該怎麼看後勢的衍 變發展?

美國在渡過疫情危害後,最切要的 應是重振疲軟的經濟,以增強實質的國 際影響力。目前濫印的美鈔、美債、通 膨等皆已達到歷史的最高點,若不能在 國際經貿中得獲紓緩,問題會相當嚴重 ,也必然衝擊到國內民意的支持,而影 響明年的期中選舉。若微弱的過半優勢 被共和黨攻破,三年多後的總統大選又

將吃緊,川普再起恐怕很難,難道就不 會有其他共和黨候選人出來挑戰嗎?拜 登這七八老翁,民主黨建製派的老手盱 衡全局,他會不清楚不憂慮嗎?為了防 範中國大陸穩速成長,他又提出龐大的

基建計畫,甚至要推動西方版一代一路 的方案。中國是一黨製全國一盤棋,令 到奉行,美國聯邦製下的各州會協調一 致配合中央行事嗎?中美關系將如何走
