China's Leader Meets With U.S. National Security Advisor Susan Rice In Beijing

Xi Calls On China, U.S. To Respect Each Other's Core Interests

BEIJING, July 25 (Xinhua) -- President Xi Jinping on Monday called on China and the United States to effectively manage their differences and respect each other's core interests.

Xi made the remarks when meeting with U.S. National Security Advisor Susan Rice at the Great Hall of the People in Beijing.

China-U.S. common interests outweigh their differences, Xi said, noting that both sides needed more mutual trust and cooperation.

The goal of China's development is to benefit its 1.3 billion people, Xi said, reiterating that China had no intention of challenging the present international rules and order, and it will never seek hegemony.

Xi called on both sides to expand economic, trade and investment cooperation, as well as cooperation in climate change and international and regional affairs to make pragmatic cooperation a "ballast" in China-U.S. ties.

Rice said the United States agreed to work with China to strengthen mutual trust, enhance pragmatic cooperation and manage issues of difference through close communication.

Xi recalled his meetings with U.S. President Barack Obama over the past three years and the consensuses agreed upon.

The decision of the two sides to build a new model of major-country relations has produced many solid achievements in bilateral relations, Xi said.

Sino-U.S. relations should always stick to the principle of no-conflict, no-confrontation, mutual respect, and win-win cooperation, according to Xi.

Rice said the U.S. side viewed its relationship with China as its most consequential ties today and China's success is in line with America's interest.

She called for more cooperation to deal with global challenges such as climate change.

This year's G20 summit will be held in east China's Hangzhou City in September.

Xi said he was looking forward to meeting with President Obama in Hangzhou in September, expressing his hope that the meeting will boost bilateral ties and direct the stable development of bilateral ties.

Xi called on China and the United States, as the world's two biggest economies, to work together and make the summit a success, which will send a signal of confidence to the world and inject new vitality into the global economy.

Rice said President Obama was also looking forward to the G20 summit and the meeting with Xi.

When meeting with Rice on Monday, Vice Chairman of China's Central Military Commission Fan Changlong and Chinese State Councillor Yang Jiechi reiterated China's position on the South China Sea issue and the deployment of Terminal High Altitude Area Defense (THAAD) in the Republic of Korea (ROK).

On July 12, the Arbitral Tribunal for the South China Sea arbitration issued its so-called award, which attempts to deny China's territorial sovereignty and maritime rights and interests in the South China Sea.

China will continue to firmly safeguard its territorial sovereignty and maritime rights and interests in the South China Sea, Yang said, noting that China opposes the award of the so-called arbitral tribunal in the South China Sea Arbitration.

China's stance on the South China Sea issue is unshakable, Fan said, affirming China's staunch position of non-acceptance and non-recognition of the award.

Fan said the Chinese military would continue to provide strong backing to safeguarding China's national territorial sovereignty and security.

In mid July, the ROK's defense ministry announced an agreement with the United States to deploy the U.S. missile defense system, THAAD, to its southeastern region despite opposition from neighboring countries.

Fan said the THAAD deployment would directly damage China's strategic security, escalate the tension in the Korean Peninsula and undermine China-U.S. mutual trust.

Yang urged the U.S. side to take China's concern seriously and to halt the deployment of the U.S. anti-missile system in the ROK.

Rice said the United States was ready to work with China to properly manage and control differences to avoid misunderstanding or miscalculation.

China And ASEAN Agree To Peacefully Resolve South China Sea Disputes Following A Gridlock

Compiled And Edited By John T. Robbins, News&Review Editor

China has come into an agreement with the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) days after it successfully dodged direct criticism from the group.

A report from the South China Morning Post revealed how China and the ASEAN released a joint statement implying their agreement that the uninhabited features in the South China Sea should remain as such.

The statement comes just days after media reported about a gridlock among senior ASEAN officials regarding the international ruling released by the Permanent Court in The Hague on the South China Sea maritime disputes.

Diplomatic Win

China maintained its position and came out stronger after the international ruling was released in July.

Since then, the United States and its ally countries that are also members of the ASEAN have tried to push for the release of a joint statement calling onto Beijing and highlighting the ruling.

Unfortunately, the ASEAN encountered a gridlock over the weekend, leading to China's "diplomatic victory" as described by an article from Reuters.

According to the outlet, the gridlock involving ASEAN foreign ministers was undone only when the Philippines withdrew the U.S.-backed request in mentioning the ruling in a statement.

Apparently, Cambodia, China's closest ally, tossed in a resolute opposition on the request.

Since the ASEAN worked strictly on consensus, the opposition brought the group in a gridlock.

Instead, the ASEAN opted to express its concerns on the disputes on the South China Sea, a topic that the ruling defined as well.

"We remain seriously concerned about recent and ongoing developments and took note of the concerns expressed by some ministers on the land reclamations and escalation of activities in the area, which have eroded trust and confidence, increased tensions and may undermine peace, security, and stability in the region," ASEAN said in a statement.

China and ASEAN Agreement

Days after the ASEAN gridlock, the member countries' leaders also came to an agreement with China that all parties should avoid any "action of inhabiting on the presently uninhabited islands, reefs, shoals, and other features and to handle their differences in a constructive manner."

The joint statement also states a vow from both parties to continue respecting the freedom of navigation in the waters as well as the peaceful resolution of disputes in the said territory.

According to SCMP, both parties will continue to push for the implementation of the Declaration on the Conduct of Parties in the South China Sea where a binding code of conduct is expected to be drafted and finalized by 2017. (Courtesy en.yibada.com/articles)
