he Houston Astros won the World Series on Wednesday on the back of a two-run home run by George Springer that busted the game open and lifted the team to a 5-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers in Game Seven.

The Astros clinched the best-of-seven series 4-3 for the first franchise title in a 55-year existence, and did so against a Dodgers team that had Major League Baseball's best regular season record. The Astros jumped on Dodgers starting pitcher Yu Darvish early, scoring all five runs in the first two innings before riding a long string of relief pitchers to the win at Dodger Stadium. "I think this is the happiest moment of my life in baseball," Astros second baseman Jose Altuve said on the field after the final out.

"We did this for them," he said of the fans in Houston, who are still recovering from the deadly Hurricane Harvey in August.

"There has been a lot going on in Houston the last year (and) they are the biggest reason why we are here." Astros manager A.J. Hinch said the team was proud of the part it played in lifting the spirits of the city. "This team loves playing in Houston and we're going to love bringing this World Series trophy back to Houston," he said. Darvish issued a leadoff walk to Astros catcher Brian McCann to on a soft ground ball by pitcher Lance McCullers Jr. to make it 3-0.

Springer stepped to the plate with one on and two out in the inning and blasted his fifth home run of the World Series for a 5-0 advantage, chasing Darvish, who ended an ignominious World Series after a similarly disastrous start in score Joc Pederson. Game Three.

"My approach was to get something I could drive," Springer said er Dave Roberts told reporters. of his two-run shot.

"And I just remember swinging and hearing the sound of the bat, and I knew it was a good sound." Dodgers ace Clayton Kershaw took the mound in the third inning "The Astros are a great team and you and threw four scoreless innings to keep his team in the game but the Los Angeles offense failed to convert hits into runs.

The National League champions were unable to capitalize on their many opportunities, stranding 10 baserunners.

The signs for the Dodgers were ominous early as World Series most valuable player Springer got the start the second inning and scored Astros off to an excellent start when he laced a leadoff double to left field corner and later scored the game's first run on a throwing error by Dodgers first baseman Cody Bellinger.

> The Dodgers scored their lone run in the sixth inning when pinch hitter Andre Ethier hit a ground ball that found a hole on the right side to

A tunnel at North Korea's nuclear test site collapsed after Pyongyang's sixth atomic test in September, possibly killing more than 200 people, Japanese broadcaster TV Asahi said on Tuesday, citing unnamed sources familiar with the situation.

Media sources have not been able to verify the report.

About 100 workers at the Punggye-ri nuclear site were affected by the initial collapse, which took place around Sept. 10, the broadcaster said.

A second collapse during a rescue operation meant it was possible the death toll could have exceeded 200, it added.

Experts have said a series of tremors and landslides near the nuclear test base probably mean the country's sixth and largest blast on Sept. 3 has destabilized the region, and the Punggye-ri nuclear site may not be used for much longer to test nuclear

News of the two accidents has not been verified by Pyongyang, which is usually reluctant to acknowledge any failures to the outside world.

North Korea's sixth and largest nuclear test on 3 September triggered landslides in the detonation area according to satellite images taken shortly afterwards, experts said.

News of the accidents came just days as the head of the Korea Meteorological Administration, Nam Jae-Cheol, said future nuclear tests risked the collapse of the mountain test site, which could leak dangerous levels of radiation into the surrounding atmosphere.

He said: "Based on our analysis of satellite imagery, we judge that there is a hollow space, which measures about 60 to 100 metres, at the bottom of Mount Mantap in the Punggye-ri site."

So far, the nuclear tests are not thought to have caused any radiation damage to foreign countries but scientists warn the hollow space inside the mountain makes it unstable.

Tunnel Collapse Could Cause Serious Radiation Leak Tunnel Collapse At North Korea Nuclear Test Site May Have Killed 200

Chinese nuclear weapons researcher Wang Naiyan told the South China Morning Post last month: "We call it 'taking the roof off'. If the mountain collapses and the hole is exposed, it will let out many bad things.

North Korea leader Kim Jong-un inspects weapon that North Korea says is powerful hydrogen bomb.

"A 100 kiloton bomb is a relatively large bomb. The North Korean government should stop the tests as they pose a huge threat not only to North Korea but to other countries, especially China."

Pyongyang has stepped up its nuclear and missile tests over the past year as the international community has put further pressure on it.

North Korea Has Conducted Its Sixth Nuclear Test

Donald Trump has repeatedly made incendiary public statements about the conduct of North Korean leader Kim Jong Un. The US President warned he will invoke "fire and fury" against the country "as you have never seen before" if it did not end its nuclear program.

But the regime has remained defiant and threatened to attack Guam - the nearest US territory to the Korean peninsula.

North Korea On Verge Of Catastrophe At Nuclear Test Site. China Warns

Chinese geologists have warned North Korea that the consequences could be catastrophic if it conducts another test at the mountainous Punggye-ri nuclear facility, the South China Morning Post reports. North Korea conducted its sixth nuclear test at the facility, situated roughly 50 miles from China's border, in early September. After the test, a senior Chinese nuclear scientist warned that another test could blow off the top of the mountain and lead to a massive collapse, which could allow radioactive waste to be blown across the border into China. This warning came as a North Korean delegation met with the Chinese Academy of Sciences' Institute of Geology in Beijing on September 20.

Pyongyang's September nuclear test was its most powerful yet. It was estimated to have a yield of 100 kilotons, which would make it roughly seven times as strong as the U.S. atomic bomb that decimated the Japanese city of Hiroshima during World War II in 1945.

In 2016, North Korea carried out a successful hydrogen bomb test, causing a 5.1 magnitude quake in the northeast of the country, some 50km northwest of Kilju city, which is right next to the Punggye-ri nuclear test site.

Since the test, North Korea has threatened to test a hydrogen bomb over the Pacific Ocean, which could pose a huge risk to aircraft and shipping. During an interview that aired on CNN Wednesday, an official representing North Korea's government, Ri Yong Pil, told the U.S. it must take the North Korean test threat "literally."

As U.S. Defense Secretary James Mattis visited the Demilitarized Zone that divides South Korea from North Korea on Friday, he decried Pyongyang's recent actions. But he also emphasized that the U.S. desires a "diplomatic solution" to the two nation's differences.

"North Korean provocations continue to threaten regional and world peace, and despite unanimous condemnation by the United Nations' Security Council, they still proceed," Mattis said. "As Secretary of State [Rex] Tillerson has made clear, our goal is not war but rather the complete, verifiable and irreversible denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula."

The U.S. and North Korea have been enemies for over half a century, but tensions have been particularly high in recent months as Pyongyang has ramped up its long-range missile tests and refused to give into global pressure to end its nuclear program. (Courtesy /www.yahoo.com/

Houston Astros Capture First World Series Title In Game 7 Win Over Los Angeles Dodgers

Compiled And Edited By John T. Robbins, Southern Daily Editor

The Houston Astros took Game 7 on the road in Los Angeles on Wednesday night, 5-1, behind the strong pitching of Lance McCullers Jr., Brad Peacock and Charlie Morton and the slugging of outfielder George Springer.

Springer, who was 2-for-4 with a double and a home run which chased Dodgers starter Yu Darvish, was named MVP.

Morton, an unlikely veteran star, did not allow a baserunner over the final three innings and was given the win.

The title comes two months after the city of Houston was devastated by Hurricane Harvey. The city suffered extreme flooding and dozens of deaths. The city rallied around its Astros in the wake of the disastrous storm. The team wore a "Houston Strong" patch on their jerseys throughout the postseason.

The Houston Astros celebrate their defeat over the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1 in game seven to win the 2017 World Series at Dodger Stadium, Nov. 1, 2017, in Los Angeles.

For a Series that was shaping up as an October classic, Game 7 quickly became a November clunker as Houston scored five runs in the first two innings off an ineffective Yu Darvish. Hardly the excitement fans felt during the Cubs' 10-inning thriller in Cleveland last fall, except for everyone wearing bright orange. "We're coming home a champion, Houston," Springer said after accepting the World Series MVP trophy named this year after Willie Mays for the first time.

Altuve, one of four carry-overs from a club that lost an embarrassing 111 times in 2013 after switching from the NL to the AL, and this collection of young stars silenced Dodger Stadium from the get-go. Normally a starter, Charlie Morton finished up with four stellar innings of relief for the win.

"We held down a really tough lineup," Morton said. "For my teammates, for the city of Houston, it's just unbelievable."

Houston Astros center fielder George Springer celebrates with shortstop Carlos Correa after hitting a two-run home run against the Los Angeles Dodgers in the second inning in game seven of the 2017 World Series at Dodger Stadium.

"I don't think you can put it into words what this means for the city of Houston," McCullers told Fox after the win.

"They were hit hard," Astros owner Jim Crane said on the dais when presented the Commissioner's trophy. "Everybody picked up on us, everybody got behind us."

The Astros -- winners of 100 games for just the second time in franchise history -were one of the favorites to win the World Series entering the postseason, but they had to rally from a 3-2 American League Championship Series deficit to the New York Yankees to do so.

Houston Astros second baseman Jose Altuve (27) holds the World Series trophy as the Astros celebrate beating the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1 in Game 7 of the World Series at Dodger Stadium on Wednesday, Nov. 1, 2017, in Los Angeles. The Astros took the Series 4-games-to-3 to capture the franchise's first title.

The Dodgers were looking to pull the same against the Astros in the World Series -- returning home trailing 3-2 in the series. But after pitching their way into a Game 7, the decisive game for the Dodgers went sour from the start.

Springer led off the game with a double and would later score on a throwing error. Alex Bregman would score the second run of the first inning on a groundout by Jose Altuve. It would be the only runs the Astros would need.

The Astros would pile on three more runs in the second inning, though

After Springer lined a leadoff double, Alex Bregman hit a bouncer that first baseman Cody Bellinger threw past Darvish for an error, allowing a run to score. Bregman aggressively stole third and scored on Altuve's grounder, and it was 2-0 after eight

A double by Marwin Gonzalez helped set up perhaps McCullers' biggest contribution, a slow grounder for his first pro RBI. Springer followed with a no-doubt, tworun drive into the left-center field bleach-

That was the Series-most 25th homer in a Major League Baseball season that set a record for home runs. It was easily enough for the Astros to offset pinch-hitter Andre Ethier's RBI single in the Los Angeles

Only once have the Dodgers clinched a crown at home, that coming in 1963 when Koufax outpitched Yankees star Whitey Ford to finish a sweep. They've never won Game 7 of the Fall Classic at their own park, dating more than a century ago to their days on the streets of Brooklyn as the Trolley Dodgers.

Brian McCann scored on a groundout by McCullers, but it was Springer's two-run homer which chased Darvish from the game. Darvish, a big midseason addition by Los Angeles, finished with 1 2/3 innings pitched and four earned runs.

Lawyers for hundreds claiming harm from Addicks and Barker flooding post-Harvey expected in court

A rare D.C. court hearing will take place in Houston to vet lawyers jockeying for leading roles

By Gabrielle Banks

In an unusual hearing Wednesday, two top federal judges will jointly preside over a crowd of lawyers representing residents and business owners who suffered property loss following Hurricane Harvey with the goal of addressing the deluge of incoming lawsuits. In the two months since the storm, nearly 850 people have sued the federal government seeking more than $100 million for damage caused by controlled releases from the swollen Addicks and Barker reservoirs. The number of claims is expected to rise in the coming weeks, but as of Tuesday, 73 federal and two state lawsuits had been filed on behalf of 843 homeowners and businesses damaged by floodwater. The bulk of the suits were filed in a specialized federal court in Washington, D.C. that handles damage suits against the government.

In addition, Houston lawyer Tony Buzbee said he planned to file claims on behalf of another 300 property owners this week. The dam release lawsuits target the same government entities for choosing to release the water: The 73 federal suits allege the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is liable for damages, while two suits filed in local civil courts contend the Harris County Flood Control District is responsible; one suit also includes the City of Houston as a defendant. The bulk of the cases are now before the U.S. Court of Federal Claims, whose judges decide various claims against government departments. As of Tuesday, ten lawsuits are class actions and the rest are individual or multi-party cases. There are enough in the system for the clerk to create a new Hurricane Harvey drop-down menu in the court's electronic search menu.

The aim of the Wednesday hearing at the courthouse in Houston is to sort the cases into sub-groups and assign lead attorneys. Chief Judge Susan Braden of the federal claims court in Washington, D.C., will oversee the post-Harvey cases at this early phase. Braden recently ruled in favor of a group of New Orleans flood victims in a post-Katrina lawsuit.

Braden has enlisted Chief U.S. District Judge Lee H. Rosenthal — whom she identified in a previous hearing as an old family friend — to help vet the attorneys who have expressed interest in taking on leadership roles. Braden conducted a packed hearing in Houston last month, where lawyers suggested it might help to divide the suits into people claiming damage from upstream overflow and those suffering damage from downstream release from the dams. Since then 19 Houston law firms have joined in requesting that the cases be consolidated into upstream and downstream groups, and asking the court to set up separate lead counsel for each group.

The vast array of surnames of the property owners who have brought suits — Khoury, Ludwidsen, Reyes, Nguyen, Hollis, Pagnotto, Mumba — reflect not only the vast cultural diversity of Houston but the wide extent of the damage the flooding caused. The so-called "takings" lawsuits seek damages under the Fifth Amendment. They argue that the government knew that releasing water from the swollen dams would flood homes and businesses and they made the choice to temporarily "take" their property as a floodway.

In addition to the Addicks and Barker dam cases, lawsuits are lining up over post-Harvey releases from another flooded waterway. Four lawsuits have been filed in state court on behalf of 65 parties claiming the government "took" property when it began releasing water from the Lake Conroe dam into the West Fork of the San Jacinto River. Those claims seek damages from the San Jacinto River Authority.

Buzbee, who represents 266 clients harmed by post-Harvey flooding and plans to double those numbers next week, said the crux of his argument is that when the Army Corps knew what it was doing and acted with intention. It opened the flood gates to prevent flooding which could have been more widespread and devastating, he said. "When the Corps acted, it knew that my clients' homes would flood. The question is not whether the Corps was justified, or had any other choice in a reasonableness analysis, or whether it was the right thing to do, etc.," he said. "The only question is what did it know when it acted. Under that analysis, our case is strong." Lawsuits may continue to be filed until the statute of limitations runs out in six years. Determining whether the controlled releases amount to a federal taking of private land calls for a lengthy investigation and environmental law and eminent domain experts have said those suing would need to show that the Army Corps or Flood Control District or the city intentionally flooded their homes, and the government's actions both worsened the flooding and contradicted the official operating agreement. The two reservoirs, which are west of Houston, were built to hold back floodwaters from Buffalo Bayou and other creeks from harming the downtown area.
